Travel Brochure

AT A GLANCE

This program offers a critical understanding of China's urbanization, exploring how the complexity of Chinese cities both conform to and defy conventional urban theories and experience of cities elsewhere in the world, especially the United States. The program provides students with an opportunity to visit a country that is becoming increasingly important in global economic, political, and cultural affairs - China.

Student living arrangements will be arranged by the Open House Education Foundation (OHEF), a non-profit organization based in Beijing, China that works closely with Binghamton University to bring university resources to Chinese high schools, linking up professionals who share the same vision of developing innovative international education programs.
